

The American Association of Food Safety and Public Health Veterinarians (AAFSPHV) is currently seeking nominations for two annual awards:

- Food Safety Veterinarian of the Year, and
- Public Health Veterinarian of the Year.

The Food Safety Veterinarian of the Year award recognizes a veterinarian's outstanding accomplishments in the field of veterinary food safety. The Public Health Veterinarian of the Year award recognizes a veterinarian in full time public health practice for his/her accomplishments in the field of public health. Nominees must be current members of the American Veterinary Medical Association; however, membership in the AAFSPHV is not required. Nomination forms can be found on the AAFSPHV website at www.aafsphv.org. Please ensure that you are submitting the appropriate form (Food Safety or Public Health) for your nominee. Self-nominations are encouraged! Nominees may only be nominated for one of the two awards. For consideration, nomination forms must be received electronically (preferred) or by mail no later than April 30, 2017, at the following address:

Kristen Obbink, DVM, MPH (Awards Committee Chair)
kobbink@iastate.edu
2170 Veterinary Medicine
1800 Christensen Drive
Ames, IA 50011

Please consider nominating a worthy individual who has contributed to these important fields.